Comey expected to refute Trump

By Gloria Borger, Eric Lichtblau, Jake Tapper and Brian Rokus, CNN

Updated 11:08 PM ET, Tue June 6, 2017

Trump has made a blanket claim that Comey told him multiple times that he was not under investigation.

But one source said Comey is expected to explain to senators that those were much more nuanced conversations from which Trump concluded that he was not under investigation. Another source hinted that the President may have misunderstood the exact meaning of Comey's words, especially regarding the FBI's ongoing counterintelligence investigation.

In his letter to Comey firing him, Trump raised the Russia investigation and asserted that: "...I greatly appreciate you informing me, on three separate occasions, that I am not under investigation." The White House has not provided details of when those three conversations

Comey To Testify He Assured Trump He Was Not Personally Under Investigation

WASHINGTON — Fired FBI Director James Comey says in prepared testimony that he did assure the president he was not personally under investigation, according to a document released Wednesday by the Senate Intelligence Committee ahead of Comey's appearance Thursday.

Comey's testimony confirms Trump's claim that Comey told the president he was not personally under investigation, but also largely confirms news

Tucker says we learned today "that many of the other leaks & big scoops from major news outlets are LIES." 🤔 Here's what Comey actually said

"In the main, it was not true," Comey added. "And, again, all of you know this, maybe the American people don't. The challenge -- and I'm not picking on reporters about writing stories about classified information -- is that people talking about it often don't really know what's going on. And those of us who actually know what's going on are not talking about it. And we don't call the press to say, 'Hey, you got that thing wrong about this sensitive topic.' We just have to leave it there."

LANKFORD: OK. OK. You had mentioned before about some news stories and news accounts, but, without having to go into all the names and the specific times and to be able dip into all that, have there been news accounts about the Russia investigation, about collusion, about this whole event or accusations that, as you read the story, you were stunned about how wrong they got the facts?

COMEY: Yes. There have been many, many stories purportedly based on classified information about — well, about lots of stuff, but especially about Russia, that are just dead wrong. LANKFORD: I was interested in your comment that you made, as well, that the president said to you, if there were some satellite associates of his that did something wrong, it would be good to find that out.

CNN Fires Editor Accused of Extensive Plagiarism

“Zakaria’s program made some attribution mistakes — a small number to be fair,” Stelter said. “The closer you look, the less it looks like ‘capital-P plagiarism.’” But when you zoom out, there is a perception problem.”

The wrongs of Fareed Zakaria

By DYLAN BYERS | 09/16/14 03:36 PM EDT

For the past month, two anonymous media watchdogs have been accusing the journalist Fareed Zakaria of serial plagiarism. Across multiple reports, the authors at Our Bad Media have cited at least three dozen instances in which the CNN host and Washington Post columnist appeared to have lifted passages from various publications and websites for unattributed reuse in his books and magazine articles and on his television program. Their most recent report, focusing on 24 instances of plagiarism on his CNN show, is the most damning to date.

This week, I conducted a review of the reports to determine whether the instances they cited truly qualified as plagiarism. I also asked two journalism ethics experts — Robert Drechsel, the James E. Burgess chair and director of the Center for Journalism Ethics at the University of Wisconsin-Madison, and Kelly McBride, the vice president for academic programs of The Poynter Institute — to review the reports. They came to the same conclusion I did: Fareed Zakaria plagiarized.

Clover, "Putin is booed at martial arts fight" Financial Times, November 20, 2011

Russian Prime Minister Vladimir Putin was loudly booed on Sunday by the crowd at a martial arts fight in Moscow, an unheard of comedown for the man who is supposed to return to the presidency next year.

Many are tired of Mr Putin's trademark authoritarian methods and fearful that his presidency could herald a period of national stagnation. "The crowd at a 'no rules fighting' match booed the champion of 'no rules elections'" quipped KermlinRussia, an anonymous joke Twitter feed.

CNN cancels Reza Aslan's show "Believer" after profane anti-Trump tweets

By Brian Stelter

Updated 2:58 PM EDT, Fri June 09, 2017

(CNNMoney) — CNN has parted ways with Reza Aslan, the host of a documentary series on the network, whose profane anti-Trump tweets were widely criticized earlier this week.

The network said Friday that it has "decided to not move forward with production" on Aslan's "Believer" series.

simply about protecting Americans. Nothing to do with religion, and nothing to do with xenophobia. It's about national security.

TAPPER: The refugee program, the vetting, is 18 months to two years.

GORKA: The length of it, maybe. That's paperwork, that's process. I am talking about serious counterintelligence questioning. Making sure somebody's story is accurate.

The absurdity under the Obama administration that you're not allowed to check somebody's public Facebook postings because that's against their privacy, hang on. American citizens don't have their Facebook posts protected from anybody else reading them. The system is broken, Jake. It's broken.

It has to be fixed. We don't want to see a Berlin here. We don't want to see people mowed down as they were in Nice happening in America.

TAPPER: We certainly don't, but there is not any example of a refugee successfully carrying out a terrorist attack in this country.

From smiling honor student to bitter terrorist: Somali refugee shown happily graduating from community college just months before injuring eleven in Ohio State 'ISIS-inspired' car-and-knife rampage

- Abdul Razak Ali Artan, an 18-year-old Somali refugee, has been identified as the assailant behind Monday's slashing at Ohio State University
- Artan injured eleven people before he was shot dead by an OSU cop
- He was born in Somalia and spent seven years in a refugee camp in Pakistan before moving to the U.S. with his mom and siblings in 2014
- The family-of-seven first lived at a Catholic Charities shelter in Dallas, before moving to Columbus - which has a large Somali community
- He graduated from Columbus State Community College in May, and transferred to OSU this August
- School newspaper interviewed Artan on his first day and he said he was scared to pray on campus
- In a Facebook post minutes before the attack, Artan wrote that he was 'sick and tired' of mistreatment of Muslims worldwide
- ISIS has claimed responsibility for the act - calling Artan a 'soldier' of their cause

Trump Treasury pick Steven Mnuchin has a 'widow foreclosure' problem

By Chris Isidore December 15, 2016: 6:48 AM ET

Reverse mortgages are advertised as a way for elderly homeowners to get the cash they need

The problem? The central scandalous claims of Woellert's article were simply untrue. As the Competitive Enterprise Institute's Ted Frank pointed out, the woman in question was never foreclosed on, and never lost her home. Moreover, "It wasn't Mnuchin's bank that brought the suit."

Rep. Roger Williams, a Texas Republican whom Barth works for, was also hospitalized and released with an injury to his leg.

Lawmakers described a chaotic scene during the shooting. Many members of the congressional GOP baseball team were huddled in a dugout while Capitol police -- who were part of Scalise's security detail -- and local Alexandria police engaged in a shootout with Hodgkinson. Congressional and law enforcement sources described it as a "deliberate attack."

Traces were still being done on the two firearms recovered at the scene -- an SKS rifle 7.62 (which is a Chinese-made AK variant) and a 9 mm pistol on Wednesday, a law enforcement source tells CNN.

Why, indeed? Curiously, Darcy seemed uninterested in CNN's inability to correct its own false reporting on the Alexandria shooting. CNN falsely reported early Thursday morning that the rifle used by the Alexandria shooter, an SKS chambered in 7.62×39, was "a Chinese-made AK variant." This is demonstrably false, and it's an error with significant implications given U.S. gun laws.

In the U.S., fully automatic rifles like the AK-47 are heavily regulated by the National Firearms Act of 1934 and require a hefty tax, a lengthy waiting period, and an extensive background check that includes photos and fingerprints. The SKS, a Soviet rifle developed and issued several years before Kalashnikov designed his AK-47, is not fully automatic. It is a semi-automatic weapon that contrasts sharply, both in form and function, with the AK-47. And even if the two firearms were functionally similar (they're not), it would be impossible for the SKS to be a variant of the AK-47 seeing as how it was developed years before the AK-47.
